ENERGY INCREASES

- a. When you destroy certain creatures. How many energy-releasing creatures can you discover?
- b. When you complete a level without using your shield. Your energy will increase by 100 points (up to enmax).

ENERGY DECREASES

- a. When you make contact with any of the enemy creatures (except when your shield is activated).
- b. When you make contact with any of the hazard areas (lava pits, acid lakes, etc.)
- c. When you fire your lasers. Energy loss = 2 points for every 30 shots taken.
- d. When you lock on shield. Energy loss = 10 points for each use of the shield.

ENMAX INCREASES

- a. When you destroy certain enemy creatures. How many enmax-bearing creatures can you discover?
- b. When you finish each level.
Level completed = 10 enmax points.

Level completed without using shields = additional 20 enmax points.

Enmax never decreases. Maximum enmax allowed in the game = 500 points.

ADDITIONAL TIPS

1. Map each world. Trace down the various mazes as you travel through each level. Take note of the booby traps and hidden creatures. Follow the most accessible and least dangerous path to the next exit.
2. Try to build up your enmax capacity whenever possible. Find the creatures that will boost enmax. Refrain from using your shields for additional enmax bonuses! See ENMAX INCREASES.
3. Shields can become an effective weapon, as enemy creatures are destroyed when they make contact with your shield. Beginners may want to use their shields extensively. However, an advanced player should choose not to use their shield (on early levels), as bonus energy is rewarded if you survive a level without activating the shield.
4. Don't shoot at everything. Avoid the creatures which provide no energy or enmax increases. Only eliminate the creatures that will benefit Thexder.
